"Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the LORD, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates" (Prov. 31:29-31). This is the ending of Solomon's praise of a virtuous woman. How well it fits Violet.

Every now and then, one comes in contact with a person who stands out in the crowd. I recently saw a cardinal feeding from one of our feeders. The beauty of his colors separated him from the other birds. It so reminded me of Violet.

In that little corner pew where Violet perched, the memory of her lingers. Whenever she was able, she sat in that seat bel- lowing out the songs, bowing her head in prayer, and listening intently to the sermons.

Her honesty, integrity, and charity was beyond reproach. She was everything a woman should be. Yet most importantly she served as a great role model of the Christian virtues.

She was an advocate for the truth. And she was never shy in expressing her feelings, nor lenient toward those who showed a lack of allegiance to Christ.

She loved her family, and cherished the memories of her husband and children who passed on before her. She longed to leave this world and be reunited with all the saints in paradise.

Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote, "Youth fades; love droops; the leaves of friendship fall; a mother's secret hope outlives them all." It has also been said, "Mothers hold their children's hands for a short while, but their hearts forever."

So for now, we bid you farewell! Rest your beautiful head on the bosom of Abraham. And don't forget to save a pew for the rest of us!
